PREFACE.

It seems especially appropriate that with the thirtieth yearly issue of the Publishers' Trade List Annual—a generation after its foundation by Frederick Leypoldt—the long-deferred Index should at last form part of the work which has often been called the "Booksellers' Bible," and which remains one of Mr. Leypoldt's most substantial contributions to the working bibliography of the American book trade. The Annual of to-day, huge as it has become, is not different from the work as he originally planned it, except that for one reason and another the prefatory portions found in the earlier volumes have been gradually omitted as encumbering the volumes and duplicating other work, until the catalogues alone have formed the entire volume. While the publication of the Publishers' Trade List Annual had been foreshadowed by several previous enterprises which were, in a sense, its beginnings, the successful and permanent working out of the useful plan of combining publishers' catalogues into one volume from year to year was first realized by Mr. Leypoldt; and the best practical compliment to his enterprise is that his plan has been successively and successfully taken up in the other chief book-producing countries—England, France, and Italy.

The important "English Reference Catalogue" of Mr. Whitaker has from the beginning included an index, which has, however, so much delayed the promptness of publication, sometimes for nearly a year, as to have much reduced its working value; but the usefulness of this index has emphasized the demand of the American trade for a similar feature in the original American volume—which demand is now supplied. It is hoped that the present Index, the general plan for which was carefully studied out in advance with reference not to bibliographical fulness but to working effectiveness, will prove all that could be asked in a compilation of the kind. It is intended not as a catalogue supplying complete information but as literally an Index, giving a clue only to the full information contained in the publishers' catalogues, yet such a clue as will often answer the question of the moment, particularly as to price, and preclude the necessity of further reference.

The Annual this year far outreaches its previous maximum, and, indeed, trenches upon the limitations of the binder in a volume of this character. Nearly 250 publishers are represented by their catalogues or by lists contained in the supplementary pages. One omission from among those lists previously included in the volume is that of a manufacturer of some lines of non-copyright books sold to the trade chiefly through jobbers who paid the Annual the compliment of saying that it brought him so many orders from individual booksellers as to interfere with his general plan of sales. There are, of course, many who incidentally or occasionally publish books, as printers, etc., whose lists are not included; their publications form, however, so small a contribution to books in print that the Index is practically a comprehensive catalogue to all books in current demand. Where any of the trade has occasion to handle a book whose publisher is not represented in the ANNUAL it would be in the general interest if he would write urging the inclusion of such a list another year.

The Index includes about 140,000 entries, covering approximately 68,000 individual volumes included in the publishers' catalogues contained in the ANNUAL proper. Each book is listed under author, collected editions being entered as Works, and also by first distinctive word of title; where the title includes a word which indicates a subject, opportunity has been taken to make a catch-word subject entry. Beyond this, in respect to subject entry, it has been impracticable to go without delays which would minimize the value of the Index. These three classes of entries are in one alphabet, so that but one reference is necessary; and in view of the comprehensive nature of the publication it is hoped that the Index will find a place as the most effective single tool at the service of the book trade.

While doubtless there will be found imperfections of one sort or another, it is believed that the practical purpose of the book trade will be met most effectively by a volume whose first merit is promptness. It is hoped that the users of the Index will be prompt to point out imperfections which they find and to make suggestions for its betterment—keeping in mind the necessary limitations of the enterprise. Whether it will be published hereafter annually or in longer periods will depend largely upon the demand from the trade in relation with its actual cost. R. R. B.

THE PUBLSHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL

Index, 1902

HINTS FOR USING THE INDEX.

(1) All the entries have been carefully checked and verified to make certain that the publisher's name given in this Index is the correct one. However, owing to the great variety of opinion in preparing the catalogues of 250 publishers, it may in some instances happen that a book cannot be readily found in the publisher's catalogue under the name given in our index though we have tried in every doubtful case to help the searcher out by making cross references freely. By looking up the index of the publisher's catalogue, whenever there is one, much time may be saved.

(2) It should be borne in mind that the Index was mde principally from the catalogues of 1901, as they appeared in the "Trade List Anual." Since then some of the publishers, for one reason or another, have dropped books from their lists, but they can no doubt give information concerning the.

(3) All the books recorded in "The Publishers' Weekl' until May 1, 1902, are included in this Index, and also the new and forthcomin books of which the publishers sent in any information up to August 1, so tat the Index may be accepted as quite up to date with the issue of the publishe' catalogues. Some of these titles, reaching us after the printing of the inde was well under way, have necessarily been relegated to an Addendum under a new alphabet. In looking for a book that may not appear in the main alhabet, this addendum should also be consulted.

(4) The separate titles of complete sets of standard authors—such as Dickens, Scott, Balzac, Reade, Bulwer-Lytton, etc.—e not given under the author entry. Such sets are arranged alphabetically by ublishers. Every book of an author, however, is given under its title with refence to author. Where publishers control only one or two books of a standard uthor the separate title appears under the author's name.

(5) There have been some changes in net prices se this Index was begun, owing to the inauguration of the net price system unde he rule of the American Publishers' Association. Though we have endeavore to keep careful trace of these changes, some may have been overlooked, and it ight be well, especially in the case of the books published by members of the Arican Publishers' Association, to verify the prices of the net books by the pric given in the catalogues of those publishers.

(6) Especial attention is directed to the prices the publications of A. L. Burt & Co., which, owing to a misunderstanding, re, in a number of cases, marked net. In every case, whether printed so or nt must be remembered that the prices of the Burt books are long prices and not
